

The Inclusion Assistant

Helping young people get better support in schools

We worked with a group called the Alliance for Inclusive Education on this work.

The Department of Education gave us money for this work.

We talked to young people with disabilities about how they were helped in mainstream schools.

The 12 people we spoke with said they wanted the support in school to be more like a personal assistant.

We called this job an 'Inclusion Facilitator'.

We made a video and did training for people who work with people with disabilities in schools to become Inclusion Facilitators.

For more information please get in touch with:
Christine Burke
cburke@learningdisabilities.org.uk